

Directions:

1. Write your name in the center circle. Think about how you see yourself and how others see you.
2. In the surrounding circles, list the most salient group and role affiliations that make up the circles of your intersectional self.
3. Write down or reflect on a moment when you felt particular pride of one of your circles of identity or affiliation.
4. Write down or reflect on a moment when you felt particular pain of one of your circles of identity or affiliation.
5. Is there something you wish people would never say about one of your circle identities?
6. Is there an identity circle that has undergone significant change across time for how you see yourself or that identity?
